Early Bank Notes Of Private Bank (Bank Of Bengal)

Paper currency was mooted in India in the late 18th Century but oldest surviving notes are from the 1800's. Bank of Bengal was one of the pioneer banks to have issued a paper currency. It was part-private capital venture but had a government contribution towards its core capital as well as regulatory board.

Uniface Notes Of Government Of India

The earliest fully Government-controlled paper currency was launched in early 1861. Its circulation was limited only within the financial 'Circles' indicated on the notes, but gradually this restriction was lifted to make the notes circulate 'Universally', anywhere within British India. The notes were printed only on one side, had serial numbers in two cardinal corners (so even a note cut in half could be encashed) and the language panels reflecting their circle of issue.

Portrait Notes Of King George V

The first pictorial notes in India were issued during the First World War, because the Uniface designs were prone for forgery. The portrait of George V was shown wearing the Imperial Crown of India and the robes of the order of the 'Star of India'. These notes began to be printed in India from 1928 onwards, owing to the establishment of the India Security Press at Nasik.

Portrait Notes Of King George VI

The most important event of George VI's reign so far as paper currency was concerned was the issue of notes by the central monetary authority, the Reserve Bank of India, which was established in 1935. During World War II, a change in design was necessitated because of instances of forgery. The issue of separate notes for Burma was also a unique event of that period. A few years before Independence, Sir C D Deshmukh became the first Indian governor of the Reserve Bank.

Indian Notes Used In Burma

Burma was separated from India by the Govt. of India Act of 1935 but remained under financial jurisdiction of the Reserve Bank of India. Separate notes for circulation in Burma only were issued in 1937. They remained in circulation for a short time as Burma was occupied by Japan during the Second World War. Following liberation, the Military Administration and Burma Currency Board consecutively held the responsibility of issuing paper money for the country.

Osmania Notes Of Hyderabad

Hyderabad was the largest Indian Princely State with an area almost equal to France! It was also the only Princely State to have issued a paper currency on a legitimized and regular basis from 1917 to 1952 (including first few years after its accession to India). The notes were denominated in 'Osmania' rupee, following the name of the Nizam, Osman Ali Khan. They were issued by the 'Khazana-e-Amira' (Royal Treasury) under the authority of the 'Sadr ul-Muham' (Finance Minister). They bear dates in the 'Fasli' calendar which was in vogue in the Deccan.

Havalas, Cash Coupons & Hundi Of Indian Princely States

During early 20th Century, many Princely States issued forms of paper currency known as 'Havalas' and 'Hundis' which were treated as 'bills of exchange' drawn on the states' treasury but had the propensity of passing into general circulation within the states' boundaries. They had limited liability and their circulation very much depended on faith. During World War II, many states issued a rudimentary paper currency of tokens, made from pressboard, some imprinted with designs of fiscal stamps, to circulate as small change. Their issue was resented by the British government, but there was little substitute to their use as the government could not satisfy the circulatory demand for small change owing to a severe shortage of metals. Some were issued by legitimate financial bodies such as the states' banks.

Indo-Portuguese Territories

The Portuguese were the first Western power to occupy Indian Territory (1498) and the last to leave it (1961). Notes were first issued in the Portuguese enclave of Goa in 1882 under the authority of the government. Later in 1906, 'Banco Nacional Ultramarino', a bank founded specifically to run financial affairs of the Portuguese colonies, took over the issue of notes. The notes are signed by various officials of the Banco, such as the Governor and the Vice-Governor and were issued under specific decrees, ratified by the government. In 1958, the currency was decimalized to 100 Centavos making an 'Escudo' but notes were issued in unusual denominations to keep them at par with the Indian rupee in their value.

Indo-French Territories

The note issue for French Colonies in India was managed by the 'Banque Indochine' which functioned from Paris and managed currency affairs of all French Colonies in the East. Its Pondicherry branch was responsible for controlling the paper currency in India. First notes were issued in 1876. Periodically, they were issued, governed by specific decrees of the bank and ratified by the government, till 1945 with bank officials such as Director General, President and Administrator signing them at various junctures.
