Alauddin Muhammad is famously known as the conqueror of the Yadavas of Devagiri to usher in a wave of Islamic conquests in Southern half of India. His first attack on Devagiri happened soon before his accession as the Sultan, which reduced the Yadavas as a vassal state. The Sultan's armies subsequently vanquished the Kakatiyas, the Hoysalas and the Pandyas. The earliest coins struck in his name at Devagiri (Deogir) Mint are towards the end of his reign, after King Ramachandra Yadava died in c. 1315. This coin bears no date, but it has the same title that Alauddin held on his other coins - 'The Second Alexander'. It is struck to the Yadava standard of an 'Asu' and as such is potentially the earliest Islamic coin in the Deccan.

Sold for : ₹ Estimate : ₹ 30,000 - 40,000

The birds on both sides of this coin are locked in 'hunt' in terms of design context. The falcon on the obverse swoops, with his wings close to his body to prey on the quail, shown cowering among the letters on the reverse. The spread-out talons of the falcon, ready to grasp the quail, are very clearly shown under his belly. On this coin the falcon is shown perched on a branch, looking back, indicating it has either accomplished the kill, or it is about swoop on his victim. This is a very rare variation, noticed so far only on a couple of pieces. The design might have had a connotation with Mughal campaigns against the Nizam Shahi Sultanate.

237. Jahangir (1605-1628 AD), silver rupee, Kishtwar (Khitwar) mint, Mihr month, AH1024/RY 10, 11.15g. Obv: legend Jahangir Shah Akbar Shah. Rev: name of mint, month, RY and AH year. Very fine, Extremely rare.
Sold for : ₹ Estimate : ₹ 1,00,000 - 1,20,000

Kishtwar is by far the one of the rarest mints, not just for the coins of Jahangir, but for the entire Mughal coinage. So far, only one specimen has been recorded, in an article published by Nicholas Rhodes in ONS-170 in 2002. Kishtwar was a small Hindu kingdom to the South of the Kashmir valley, mostly semi-independent throughout its 400 years' existence. It served as a refuge for the last dynasty of the Sultans of Kashmir after the Sultanate succumbed to a Mughal invasion under Akbar (1586). Early in Jahangir's reign, Bhup Singh the king of Kishtwar successfully repelled a Mughal army (1606). The kingdom was finally conquered by the Mughals in 1619, when Gaur Singh the successor of Bhup Singh, was captured and his capital plundered.

The date on this coin, however, is intriguing, as it corresponds to August 1615 – a period in which Kishtwar was not a subject to, nor invaded by the Mughals. Bhup Singh, the only ruler to have ruled without any Mughal interference, ruled over it till 1618. Nick Rhodes suggests that the coins were prepared in anticipation of an invasion which could not happen because of an outbreak of plague. Curiously enough, no coins of Kashmir mint struck in the same year are known but the similarity of the Kishtwar coin with issues of Kashmir mint is very evident.

Patna is a very rare mint for the Kalima-type 'Jahangiri' rupees. Another piece is in the Lucknow Museum (LMC 1371), dated AH1016/Ry3. This is probably the only specimen in private hands.

When Jahangir died on 28 Safar, AH 1037 in Kashmir, his powerful courtier Asaf Khan feared the Queen Nur Jahan would place on throne her favourite son Shahryar as the new king. He enthroned Bulaki, the son of Jahangir's second son Khusrau, as 'Dawar Bakhsh'. The Khutba was read in Dawar Bakhsh's name at Bhimbar. His position was bolstered by his brothers and cousins joining him. Asaf Khan first defeated Shahryar's army on the outskirts of Lahore and then having secured Shah Jahan's agreement, proclaimed him as the emperor on 2 Jumada-I 1037. The puppet Dawar Bakhsh was killed along with his brothers and cousins who had sided with him by Shah Jahan's orders on 26 Jumada-I 1037, thus bringing his short reign to an end.

In the decade after Aurangzeb's accession, the standard for copper Dams was downgraded from 20 gm to a lighter standard. This coin is unusual in many ways - unlike most other coins of the anonymous type, it has legends inscribed in Nastaliq; it also has the mint-name written in rather curious manner with the locative suffix 'abad' separated from 'Ahmed' to the top line.

The Mughals fought a long-drawn battle against the Marathas during 1689-1700. The Maratha Chhatrapati Rajaram was besieged in Gingee. In 1698, the fort of Gingee fell to the Mughals. This coin was struck either in its aftermath, or before the fall, to finance the siege.

 Sold for : ₹ Estimate : ₹ 1,20,000 - 1,50,000

The date/R4 combination reflects the 'corrected reckoning' of Aurangzeb's reign, fixed to 1 Ramzan AH 1068 by an imperial decree. The coin was thus struck between 20-4-1661 and 16-8-1661. This is the latest instance recorded for the 'square areas' type of Shahjahanabad mint, which in all probability is the rarest mint for the type.

284. Muhammad Shah (1719-1748 AD), gold mohur, Aurangabad mint, AH 115x/Ry 8, 10.76g. Obverse has 'Sahib Qiran Thani' legend; reverse has mint-name on the top. About extremely fine, Unique and historically important coin.
 Sold for : ₹ Estimate : ₹ 3,00,000 - 4,00,000

This is a very curious coin of 'Aurangabad' mint. The more familiar Aurangabad in the Deccan struck coins at this time with the honorific 'Khujista Bunyad' as the mint-name. It is strange that it must have reverted to 'Aurangabad' only for year. It is plausible therefore that this coin must have been struck at another place named 'Aurangabad'. There are many contenders but a place now located in the Pakistani Punjab province is a very likely candidate.

The coin also shows a curious AH/Ry mismatch. It is possible that even though it is struck in the name of Muhammad Shah, the Ry it bears refers to Nadir Shah dated from his accession in AH1148. This would be well explained in the context of the Punjabi Aurangabad - the Nawab of Punjab, Zakariya Khan had virtually accepted the suzerainty of Nadir Shah. He is a thus possible candidate for striking this unique coin.

 Sold for: ₹ Estimate : ₹ 6,000 - 8,000

297. Shah Alam II (1759-1806 AD), silver rupee with pseudo mint-name 'Shahjahanabad', 'Sahib-Qiran' couplet on obverse with Devanagari word Ram inscribed in the second line, Ry 35, 10.74g. Extremely fine, Very rare.
 Sold for: ₹ Estimate : ₹ 40,000 - 50,000

The inclusion of the word 'Ram' it is plausible that it must have been a Hindu polity. Possible contenders are the Jats, the Ahirs and the Rajputs. Most likely, the coin is issued by a small chieftain, assuming coining rights in the turbulent last decade of the 1h century, somewhere in the vicinity of Delhi. The coin is yet another example of the complicated yet amusing and challenging series of issues with pseudo mint-name 'Shahjahanabad'.

298. Shah Alam II (1759-1806 AD), silver rupee with pseudo mint-name 'Shahjahanabad', AH 1208/Ry 37, 'Sahib Qiran' legend and an umbrella mark on obverse, a whorled 'star' to the left of the Ry on reverse, 11.10g. Extremely fine, Rare.
 Sold for: ₹ Estimate : ₹ 5,000 - 7,000

It is evident that the coin was not struck in the imperial mint at Shahjahanabad but at another place, with 'Shahjahanabad' as a mint name. Coins with 'Shahjahanabad' as a pseudo mint-name with the distinguishing symbol of the star form a long series which runs for several years, till the end of Shah Alam II's reign. In Ry31, the couplet on obverse changes to 'Sahib Qiran' variety.

Indore mint attempted to launch mechanised silver currency in 1896-98 but failed to do so because of the international silver crisis and lack of technical support. Although this coin is struck from the dies of a rupee it was mentioned as a 'Half Anna' coin in 'Studies in Holkar State Coinage', by Bhatt-Sethi-Holkar. It is more likely to have been a trial strike of a pattern. It is plausible that these trial strikes escaped into circulation.
