Mokhadaji Gohil was a contemporary of Muhammad bin Tughlaq of Delhi. He tried to expand his kingdom by defeated small neighbouring rulers. He then conquered the island of Piram and also the seaport of Ghogha. His mission was to make seafaring safe for voyagers and traders. However he incurred the wrath of the Sultan of Delhi who attacked him at Ghogha. Mokhadaji was defeated in the battle and killed.

No coins attributed to Mokhadaji are yet known and this appears to be the very first specimen. The attribution is tentative but aided by the fact that the coin is very similar to the Chudasama issues of Junagarh, the legend suggests a 14th century date and 'Mukharaja' could well be a Sanskrit form of 'Mokhad', the Gujarati name of the king.

The mint Udisa is probably the rarest of mints for silver coins of Jahangir. Although the province of Orissa had been assimilated in the Mughal Empire towards the end of Akbar's reign, it had remained volatile and prone to rebellions, mainly by the Gajapati rulers of Puri. During Jahangir's reign, three campaigns were launched to suppress the Gajapatis. This coin is issued during the second campaign, which was commanded by a Hindu general, Raja Kalyan Das. The campaign ended in the repulsion of the Mughal troops by the Gajapatis. A final assault was launched six years later under the command of Asaf Khan, the brother of Noor Jahan, to completely quell the rebellious Gajapatis.

The reading of the mint-name on these coins is not certain. On some, the legend appears to be 'Tirchanapali', but on others a distinct 'shosha' is visible to the left. In terms of Farsi, orthography, all visible letters except the 'shosha' would fit both 'Tirchanapalli' and 'Farrukhnagar'.

 Sold for : ₹ Estimate : ₹ 70,000 - 80,000

The Samsthana of Gadwal was one of the three important Hindu feudatory states under the Nizam of Hyderabad. In early 18th century its ruler, Somashekhara Ananda Reddy or Somanadri played an important role in securing its foundations. So far, it was thought that the mint at Gadwal became active only in the reign of Shah Alam II, producing local or 'Chulnee' coins. This is first ever known coin of Gadwal in the name of Muhammad Shah, and it puts the inception of the mint almost twenty years earlier than it was previously thought.

 Sold for : ₹ Estimate : ₹ 40,000 - 50,000

The mint name on this coin is remarkably fully preserved which is a very unusual and rare feature for a fractional issue. Stylistically the coin appears to be of Muhammad Shah, but Alamgir II is also a likely contender.

Sold for : ₹ Estimate : ₹ 1,00,000 - 1,25,000

In middle 18th century, the Marathas launched a series of campaigns to exact tributes in the "Carnatic" region. The money that flowed back into Maharashtra as a result of these consisted mainly of Arcot rupees. As such the Arcot rupee became a very popular currency in Maharashtra. Many mints struck copies with same design sometimes suitably modifying it.

A series of Arcot rupees with Trisul symbol is known from Maharashtra with mint name "Arcot". These coins are sometimes identified as "Danish" because of a debatable reference by Uno Berger Janssen. The coin offered here is a direct successor of these coins but the mint name here clearly ends in "- Ganw" (Gaon).

The find spots of all these "Trisul" marked rupees broadly overlap with territories held by the Patwardhan sardars who played a crucial role in the "Carnatic" campaigns. It is plausible that they were instrumental in the Advent and spread of the "Arcot" rupee and its derivatives in the Deccan. Tasgaon was a major Patwardhan jagir town and it is plausible that this rupee was struck there.

Maharaja Mangal Singh II (1874-1892), was a minor when he succeeded to the throne of Alwar State. The State continued to be administered by the Political Agent and the Council of Regency till December, 1877 when he was invested with ruling powers. The hereditary title of Maharaja was bestowed on him in the year 1889. In 1877, he entered into a contract with the British Government under the Native Coinage Act of 1876 according to which silver coins of Alwar state were to be manufactured and supplied by the Calcutta Mint. He was given the title of 'GCSI' (Knight Grand Commander of the Order of Star of India) on 1st January 1886. As the title is mentioned on this ring, it must have been made sometimes between 1886, and the Maharaja's death in 1892. It is possible that it belonged to one of his personal service staff.

Brief History: As the Black overprinted notes of 100 rupees Burma were not clearly legible, they were exchanged by cutting the lower left hand quarter and retained for accounting purpose. The date on which it was exchanged was recorded with a seal on the reverse quarter note. In this case the date of exchange was 16-Sep-1937. This quarter note was never used as emergency money or as 25 rupees. The remaining 3/4th note was destroyed, hence never observed.
