Sold for : ₹ .....

Estimate : ₹ 3,00,000 - 4,00,000

Obverse die of earlier ruler Hasan Shah, and reverse die of Fath Shah. This is an example of Kashmir coinage where the obverse die of Hasan Shah dated 876 was used at least 16 years later by his successor Fath Shah. Such couplings have been observed in Kashmir coinage more than one time. This shows that the original strike was limited in number and that the die survived for several years. It also indicates strict control over the mint where old dies were preserved and used later.

Sold for : ₹ .....

Estimate : ₹ 2,00,000 - 2,50,000

The period between about 1530 and 1550 was chaotic in Kashmiri politics, with the rivalry between the local Chak dynasty, the Kashghari occupants and the Mughals under Humayun who later made the Kashghari noble Haidar Dughlat their vassal, all fighting for power. Nadir Shah was crowned three times in this turbulent period. Gold coins of his very short-lived third and final reign have hitherto not been known, until this coin surfaced. The fact that it belongs to his third reign is confirmed from its stylistic similarity with the coins struck in the name of Humayun by Haidar Dughlat, which immediately preceded this issue. A rare and important coin of an ephemeral reign.

This is an unusual coin in terms of its design, date of issue and mint. Unlike other coins of Akbar, it has a 'crescent'-like mark at the end of the word 'Muhammad' on obverse and the Shahada here is enclosed in a circular margin. Its date of issue (AH 993) is much too late for the usual run of issue of coins of the 'Shahada' type, and it appears to have the epithet 'Baldah' (visible at 6 o'clock on the reverse) for the mint-name. 'Baldah' is known for the mints of Agra, Sahrind and Kalpi for Akbar's coinage but the very small remnants of the mint seen to the left of the word do not appear to fit any of these. Instead, it is tantalizingly plausible to infer from the vestiges that the mint-name is 'Banaras'. Whichever way one looks at it, this is an interesting and unusual coin.

Sold for : ₹ .....

Estimate : ₹ 3,000 - 4,000

Coins of this type were previously attributed to the Marathas, owing to the 'Nagfani' symbol often encountered on Maratha rupees of Pune mint. However, in recent times, this attribution has come under scrutiny and this particular coin conclusively proves that the type was struck after the Maratha rule had come to an end. It is most likely a component of the 'Kachcha' currency circulating all over Berar and Marathwada regions, owing to a stimulus in demand for small copper coins to make payments to the labourers in cotton farming industry.

Towards the end of his reign Shivaji launched his famed 'Southern conquest' to settle disputes with his step-brother Venkoji of Thanjavur and to gain his share of their father's jagir lands. The fortress of Jinji became his principle seat, and remained a Maratha stronghold till it fell to the Mughals in early 1690s. The unusually low weight standard this coin was struck at was prevalent to the North of Jinji, in the territories of Southern Rayalaseema.

Jambusar was a town of considerable importance for cotton trade of Gujarat. Between 1772 and 1783, it was a British possession. In that year it was given back to the Marathas who in 1800, as part of revenue settlements handed it over to the Gaikwads. It remained in Gaikwad hands till 1817, when as a result of the final Maratha War, it was taken over by the British again. Gaikwad issues of Jambusar mint are extremely rare and known only for a couple of Ry's. Evidently, the mint was operated for a short period and most likely stopped in response to the spread of the 'Surat' rupees of Bombay.

This unique heavy weight Anna must have been struck during the period of high demand for small value copper coins prompted by the growth of cotton cultivation and trade in the Berar region. Although most likely to be a 'Kachcha' issue, it is evidently struck with official dies and thus, must have been issued from a government-run mint. It has exceptional rarity and importance as a copper coin.

Indore mint attempted to launch mechanised silver currency in 1896-98 but failed to do so because of the international silver crisis and lack of technical support. Although this coin is struck from the dies of a rupee it was mentioned as a 'Half Anna' coin in 'Studies in Holkar State Coinage', by Bhatt-Sethi-Holkar. It is more likely to have been a trial strike of a pattern. It is plausible that these trial strikes escaped into circulation.

Alberto Gomes, in his book 'Moedas Portuguesas' illustrates a Spanish 'Pillar' 8-Real coin - popularly called as 'Spanish Dollar' - which is counter struck with a similar mark (Gomes 70.01). A counter struck 'Maria Theresa Dollar' is mentioned by Gomes but he does not illustrate it. While Gomes remarks that the style of the crest is 'similar to the coins of Malacca', on the coin offered here it looks very close to the one encountered on late 18th century Indo-Portuguese copper coins of Diu. The 'Maria Theresa Dollar' was a popular trade coin in the Arabian Peninsula, an area which has had long trading links with Gujarat. It is therefore possible that this coin arrived in Gujarat via Arabia and then was countermarked by the Portuguese in Diu, with a view to make it into a 'Dollar' of their own to facilitate trade further east.

A similar coin was sold in our Auction 20 lot number 590 estimated at Rs.1,50,000 and sold for Rs.1,62,000.

Awadh was declared an 'independent kingdom' on 9th October 1819 and Ghaziuddin Haider, the Nawab-Wazir was now conferred with the title of 'King' by the East India Company. His coronation marks a break from the Indian courtly culture. He chose to adopt European symbols of kingship and was the first Indian king to do so. Thus, his crown and coat-of-arms have a clear European design. The designs for this medal and Ghaziuddin Haider's coinage were made by court artists Roshan Lal and Jamiyat Rai. The latter chose to sign his work with the letter 'Jim' which is not present on this piece, so this must have been the artwork of Roshan Lal. For further reading, see article by Richard Burn, "The coronation medal of the first king of Oudh", Journal of the Numismatic Society of India, Vol. III, part 2, 1941, pp.113-114.

Indian Peace Keeping Force (IPKF) was the Indian military contingent performing a peacekeeping operation in Sri Lanka between 1987 and 1990. It was formed under the mandate of the 1987 Indo-Sri Lankan Accord that aimed to end the Sri Lankan Civil War between Sri Lankan Tamil nationalists such as the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) and the Sri Lankan military.

One of the IPKF's most memorable battles was the liberation of Jaffna in late 1987, codenamed 'Operation Pawan'. The fiercest battles between the Indian Army and the Tigers were fought at Kopai North, Kokuvil and Kurruparai. An evacuation attempt at Urelu in December also saw a lot of action. The medal no doubt commemorates the bravery of Indian soldiers fighting the LTTE.

The system of 'model prisons' was advocated in the Prison Reforms Committee of 1946 to try experimenting with "latest principles of penology" and where "latest sociological principle of penal reform are incorporated". The Lucknow Central Prison was converted into a 'model prison' in 1949. Here the inmates were allowed to mix freely with least surveillance and there was no social, psychological or physical isolation. They were also given basic education and trained in various vocational skills, such as dhurrie-making, pot-making, dairy farming, papermaking and spinning yarn on the Charkha. At an establishment named 'Ganga Bhawan', the prisoners had their own canteen. The prisoners got paid for their work and they paid for their own food. Evidently, these tokens were issued to facilitate such monetary transactions inside the prison. The effigy of Mahatma Gandhi is appropriately placed on the token, as his broader ideas about Humanity and Ethics were at the root of founding 'model prisons'.
